

DO YOU NEED INTERNSHIP TO START YOUR CAREER?

Transition from academic zone to professional life can be shocking and frightening for fresh graduates. Being used to stressful exams and deadline was more comfortable to some sense compared to new corporate culture.

Office Etiquette and Professional Space-

Internship is an opportunity to train and work often part time or full time offered by many corporate organizations. It allows one learning office decorum and etiquettes and understands how a professional space operates.

Networking and Work Experience-

Learning to build is crucial and an effort that is quite different from making friends. During internship one learns the extent of professional networking and how to sustainably build a network relevant to their career. In a competitive job market experience is an important requirement to even apply to jobs. For fresh graduates only internship allows one to gain work experience without any prior experience. Internship helps building up resume that help filling the gap of relevant work experiences.

Team Work & Practical Field Experience- Internship is a great opportunity for one to learn from others. It grows interpersonal skills. One learns to maintain healthy competitive mindset. One slowly learns how to apply the academic knowledge in practical field. Many skills in academic life becomes valuable skillsets in corporate life to succeed.

One may not always find internship to their desired field but still it might help them to be introduced to the occupational field and help later shift to their desired field. Having one internship can boost one's confidence then staying unemployed.
